New Senate, House lines shift political boundaries

JAMES CALVERT
jcalvert@kystandard.com

The changing boundaries of state Senate and state House of Representatives districts are creating some political shake-up for Nelson County. The district lines are redrawn every 10 years based on population from the U.S. Census to provide equal representation throughout the state.

Nelson County experienced a growth rate of 15.9 percent since 2000, which is double the state's growth rate of 7.4 percent. The population growth rate decreased in counties in Eastern and Western Kentucky, while the population swelled in Jefferson, Fayette and Nelson counties.

The Senate voted 22-14 and the House voted 58-39 to approve the redistricting plans Thursday, which were expected to be signed by Gov. Steve Beshear.

Nelson County will see a change in its political representation if the proposed plans are approved.

Currently Nelson County is represented by Sen. Jimmy Higdon in the 14th Senate district, which includes Marion, Mercer, Nelson, Washington and

What the shift means so far?

Sen. Jimmy Higdon

Rep. David Floyd

• Sen. Jimmy Higdon, who currently represents Nelson County in the Senate, will no longer be within boundary lines after the shift of lines.

• Rep. David Floyd will file for Nelson's new Senate assignment which includes Nelson and Bullitt counties.

• Dick Heaton has made it known he will file for the new House district that includes only Nelson County

Arson Investigation

TOM ISAAC/PLG News

The Bardstown-Nelson County Fire Department responded to fires at two barns, 150 yards apart on Hershell Leathers Lane, Wednesday night. The first call came at 6:09 p.m., the second shortly after 9 p.m. Fire department Sgt. Paul Vance said he believes the second fire may have been intentionally set shortly after firefighters left the scene of the first fire. Arson is suspected in both blazes.

Officials suspect barn fires were intentionally set

Fires that destroyed two barns on Hershell Leathers Lane Wednesday night may have been intentionally set.

At least one juvenile is a suspect in the blazes, Nelson County Sheriff Stephen Campbell confirmed Thursday.

The Bardstown-Nelson County Fire Department was dispatched to the area about 6:09 p.m.

"We did have a structure that was probably 20 by 80 (feet) long that was fully involved. It was actually three quarters of it full of rolled bales of hay or straw," fire department Sgt. Paul Vance said.

Firefighters moved nearby hay trailers away from the barn, but Vance said there were 25-30 bales inside, and it's hard to extinguish a fire inside bales until they're torn apart, a feat that would likely require large equipment.

"Once you get a roll bale on fire you have to actually physically take it apart to suppress it," he explained.

Firefighters were on scene about two hours, during which time they surveyed the area and also checked out another barn about 150 yards away.

"Obviously somebody had set this fire, and there was a possibility that because there was a second barn 150 yards away — there was a possibility of a second fire," Vance said. "They didn't have no electricity out there and we had found in a grain bin evidence that somebody had been burning hay in that grain bin."

There were also signs hay had been burned inside a large, metal culvert pipe on the property, and a fiberglass tank about 20 feet away had smoke rolling out of it, also possibly set on fire, according to Vance.

When the fire department left on another run, they reportedly asked the man leasing both barns, Ricky O'Daniel, to watch it for the evening.

"About 30 minutes after we got back, at 9:04 p.m., we got knocked out on a second barn fire, which was the second barn out there," Vance said.

Because the fire department had checked out the second barn during its first run, Vance said he believes the second fire may have been intentionally set some time between 8:30 and 9:04

Too many chiefs?

Fire dept. corporation votes for new top post

ERIN L. MCCOY
emccoy@kystandard.com

A new chief was elected for the Bardstown-Nelson County Volunteer Fire Department Inc. Monday, but Bardstown Mayor Bill Sheckles insists that department, often referred to as the "corporation," should have the same chief as the City of Bardstown Fire Department.

Anthony Mattingly remains chief of the city department, appointed by Sheckles. However, the city department's First Assistant Chief Marlin Howard was elected chief of the corporation by a vote of 32-12, Sheckles told PLG-TV 13.

"We've never had two chiefs," Sheckles said Thursday. "It's going to complicate things. It's not necessary. We won't have two chiefs, OK, we'll have one chief."

On Wednesday, Howard did not want to comment specifically on his plans.

NELSON COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD

District outlines revenue-saving options for FY 2013 budget

ERIN L. MCCOY
emccoy@kystandard.com

As the Nelson County School District seeks to cut expenditures for next school year, it may face cuts in special education for the second year in a row, along with draw-downs in spending on the district level. However, the school board voted Tuesday to keep the number of staff almost the same as in the current fiscal year.

Executive Director of Operations Tim Hockensmith delivered a draft budget predicting further state funding cuts for fiscal year 2012-2013. Nonetheless, the board voted to work with a compensating tax rate — a rate that would keep property tax revenues the same — rather than a 4 percent increase for the preliminary budget passed Tuesday.

Also approved by the board was a 2012-2013 staffing formula that would "essentially keep your staffing formula unchanged, with one exception,"

>> Budget

Hockensmith said.

That exception would be to change the number of custodians needed per square feet of building. By increasing the square footage per custodian, the district would likely be able to eliminate five positions district-wide to compensate for the additional five positions needed to staff Thomas Nelson High School when it opens in August 2012, Hockensmith explained.

Hockensmith said he is also working with TNHS Principal Wes Bradley to seek proposals to possibly outsource custodial work there to see if it is more cost-effective.

As in a work session earlier this month, the board reiterated that staff will not be doubled with the opening of TNHS. For instance, while Nelson County High School now has six secretaries, each school will likely have three next year, Hockensmith said.

At this time, Hockensmith predicts only two new hires because of the new school — a guidance counselor and an additional teacher.

The finalization of the budget is months away; another draft is slated to be presented to the board in May, with a complete draft to be finalized in August.

Board member Nicky Rapier pushed for the compensating rate, but added that doesn't mean he will vote for that rate later on.

"If we tell you to do a 4 percent budget increase now then we've locked ourselves in," Rapier said, adding that he is not opposed to tax increases. He pointed to the board's vote on last year's first-draft budget for a compensating rate, though it ultimately chose a 2.5-percent revenue increase.

"I really think we ought to work from the minimum and work our way up," board member Frank Hall agreed.

Cutting expenses

Superintendent Anthony Orr outlined a number of ways in which the district plans to decrease expenses in the fiscal year 2012-2013 budget, including a $150,000 cut in special education funding, $100,000 in cuts to district-wide positions and cuts to transportation costs.

Unlike last year, the special education cuts to which Orr was referring wouldn't be mandated by the Kentucky Department of Education. In March 2011, Orr announced that 14-and-a-half special ed positions would be cut after a drop in state funding for those positions. This time, Orr said, the cuts would be the incentive of the administration and board with the aim to cut spending.

"We think that we can get leaner and make some cuts. It might be attrition," Orr said. "It would likely be where we would condense some staff positions but we don't have more details about it yet."

Those positions affected would be on the district-wide level. Such positions range from occupational and physical therapists to speech pathologists and school psychologists, Orr said, not pinpointing any single position that may be affected. He said he didn't believe the cuts would impact classroom instruction.

"I don't want you to infer that we would cut the services. We would ... just have fewer people providing those services," he said.

Details on plans to cut $100,000 in expenses on the level of district-wide administration were few as of Wednesday.

"We don't know who, what, when or how yet," Orr said, though he mentioned attrition — not hiring replacements after individuals retire — could be an option in this area as well.

After the Nelson County Early Learning Center's first semester opens, Orr added he believes bus routes can be readjusted to cut down on fuel costs and wages for bus drivers, who have in some cases put in more time than usual, particularly in transporting students to and from half-day preschool.

"We feel pretty good that we'll be able to cut $250,000

ERIN L. MCCOY/The Kentucky Standard

Members of the Nelson County Key Club, part of Key Club International, told the Nelson County School Board what their organization does at a meeting Tuesday. The Key Club has worked to create Kiwanis gift baskets and helped with Relay for Life, among many other activities. The club has about 50 members. Pictured are, from left to right: Nelson County High School sophomore Maggie Downs, junior Hannah Mudd, senior Sarah Bain, junior Lissa Mattingly, and sponsor Richard Argueta. Brandee Wilson is also a club sponsor.

in transportation for this coming year," Orr said. He added he doesn't foresee a large increase in transportation expenditures with the opening of Thomas Nelson High School in August 2012.

The district may face an increased utility cost of $250,000 with the opening of TNHS, however, Orr said.

The expense of new textbooks, which haven't been funded by the state since fiscal year 2008, is imminent, Hockensmith added, estimating the loss amounts to $150,000 a year.

"We're not asking for money for textbooks in this budget, but at some point — at some point we know we're going to have to provide a solution," he said.

The big picture

All the numbers in the draft budget are preliminary, Hockensmith and Orr emphasized, particularly since projections of how much the district will receive in SEEK funding has been on shaky footing. SEEK is state funding — the largest source of revenue for the district at a little less than 60 percent — used for general fund expenses.

In the middle of fiscal year 2011, the state announced a shortfall that translated to about $350,000 less than expected for the Nelson County School District. This year, the district has learned it will receive $466,000 less in SEEK than the state had estimated.

Hockensmith predicted about a $400,000 shortfall in this year's budget and, he told the board, he's predicting even more for next year's — a $500,000 shortfall.

Even with a 4 percent increase in property tax revenue included in the draft budget Hockensmith presented to the board Tuesday, he predicted the district's contingency fund would drop by $250,000 from last year. The 4 percent increase could result in an approximate $400,000 increase in revenue for the district, though until property value estimates are released in late summer, no one will know for sure, Orr said.

The compensating rate would bring the drop in contingency to $650,000 as of Tuesday's rough estimate, according to Hockensmith. Contingency would in that case drop from about 4 percent to 3 percent of the budget. The state recommends 5 percent with a minimum of 2 percent.

Newly appointed board Chair Damon Jackey said the board should be cautious when it begins discussing a decrease in services or a drop in the district's contingency fund. He pointed out that, as Hockensmith said, the contingency today is at approximately one month's payroll for the district, or about $2 million at the beginning of this year.

But Hockensmith pointed out that other options to save money exist, including cutting kindergarten to a half day (the minimum required) for an estimated savings of $350,000, going to four-day school weeks, or freezing automatic annual employee raises.

"There's nothing left to cut that parents are not going to feel and that doesn't mean that when they don't feel it necessarily that it's not important," Hockensmith said.

With a 4 percent increase, the draft budget would be $150,000 higher than last year's — $29,869,042 compared to $29,719,042 in 2011-2012, Hockensmith said. With the compensating rate, the budget would decrease to $29,469,042.

In other news:

- Jackey was elected the new chair of the school board, with Larry Pate as vice chair. The board generally rotates the positions annually.

- Members of the Nelson County Key Club, which has about 50 members, presented information on their club to the board.
- The Nelson County School Board agreed to redraw board members' district lines to match the magisterial districts approved by Nelson Fiscal Court, pending state approval. Hall represents District 1, Adam Wheatley District 2, Pate District 3, Rapier District 4 and Jackey District 5.
- Director of Food Services Charlotte Lewis presented a Student Nutrition Report to the board.
- Phase I and Phase II construction at Thomas Nelson High School is on schedule, according to Project Manager Michael Salsman of BCD, Inc. The building should be complete, with the exception of the auditorium, in March, Orr said. The district is likely to buy mostly new furniture for the building, he added.
- The board approved a number of change orders on its construction projects, including a cost of $2,823 to extend electrical wiring to the TNHS scoreboards and a savings of $4,257 on the construction of a wall at TNHS.
- The board also approved several final payments to contractors on the Nelson County Early Learning Center, including $39,715 to Emco Enterprises for painting and $116,559 to C & T Design for food service equipment.
- Work to replace part of New Haven School roof is moving forward, architect Steven Ward said.
- The board accepted a $21,179 offer of assistance from the School Facilities Construction Commission for construction projects, to be paid annually for 20 years and bond at about $300,000, according to Hockensmith. SFCC assistance is usually offered every other year; in 2010 the offer was roughly $125,000, he said.

"We're working out ... the details for all that, but it was just the way that the general membership apparently wanted to vote," he said. "From my standpoint of it, I was nominated by a member of the corporation membership, which they are the same members that volunteer for the corporation and the city."

Howard said he could not comment Wednesday whether he would continue to serve as first assistant chief for the city, one of nine full-time positions, according to the mayor.

"I'm going to be thrilled to serve as chief," Howard said. "I guess everybody always hopes that they'll be able to make improvements. That's where, especially in the fire service, you strive to help your customers."

Corporation chief is a volunteer position, he said.

Mattingly declined to comment on the vote.

The two departments share the same headquarters on North Fifth Street, and they generally aid each other in fire runs. The city department is city-funded while the corporation is funded based on subscription fees paid by county residents within its district. Those who don't choose to pay the $50 subscription fee are charged if the fire department is called to their residence or business.

According to Sheckles, the corporation holds elections annually, then its recommendation is presented to the Bardstown mayor and ultimately approved by the Bardstown City Council alongside the appointment of the city fire chief.

If the mayor doesn't like the recommendation, "I can ask for another vote," Sheckles said.

However, the corporation is a private entity operated under a board of directors, over which the mayor has no formal authority. Sheckles acknowledged if the department didn't want to vote again it would not have to.

As of mid-day Thursday, Sheckles said the situation had not been resolved.

"Nothing's really going on until I get some things straightened out," he said on his way to the fire department. "I've got some things that I've got to get lined out with some people."

He did not comment on who he may prefer to be the departments' chief.

Taylor counties. But after the proposed redistricting, Nelson County would be part of the 15th district, which would include Nelson and Bullitt counties. If Beshear approves the redistricting plan, Higdon, who lives in Marion County, will no longer represent Nelson County when his term expires at the end of this year. Under the new plan, the 14th District would include Marion, Mercer, Washington and Taylor counties and gain Lincoln County in the eastern part of the 14th district.

In the House of Representatives, Nelson is currently represented by Rep. David Floyd in the 50th district. The district also includes part of Bullitt County and part of Spencer County. Under the proposed redistricting plan, Nelson County would be its own district as the 50th district in the state House of Representatives.

Floyd has already filed to run again for the House seat but said Wednesday that he plans to drop his filing for another term as a representative. Instead, he plans to file to run for the state's newly drawn 15th Senate district in November's general election.

"If I make it through the primary in May, I will be a (Republican) nominee for the 15th seat in the state Senate," Floyd said. "In the meantime, I will continue to serve as a representative."

A Democratic candidate has already announced intentions to file for Floyd's vacant House seat in 2012. Former Bardstown Mayor Dick Heaton (D) announced Wednesday he will be a candidate for state representative in the 50th district. Heaton said he plans to file for the seat within the week.

"My desire to continue my public service for the people of Nelson County is stronger than ever," Heaton said. "As state representative for Nelson County, I want to use my experience in public office, business and civic work to help all the people of Nelson County and the 50th District. I enjoy public service and I feel like I still have much to give of myself to this effort."

The deadline to file for the House of Representatives is Jan 31.

p.m. O'Daniel reportedly could have seen the second barn from the first, but Vance said O'Daniel had already left.

Campbell said that investigating sheriff's Dep. Jerry Hardin indicated later he didn't believe the first fire sparked the second.

The second barn, two stories and approximately 30 by 60 feet, contained about 115 roll bales, Vance said. On the second floor, they were stacked all the way to the roof, he added.

"The way the barn was set up, we had no way of getting into the hay bales to even start to break them up," Vance said.

The fire was still minor when he arrived.

"It had a small fire, maybe approximately 3 foot high on one corner, and when I got there Jerry (Hardin) was already there and he was talking to the two people that called it in," he said.

But, Vance said, there was ultimately no way to save the barn and both barns were left to burn through the night.

"There was really nothing we could do with the fire that we had, and we were going to let it burn itself out," he said.

Firefighters were dispatched to the scene one more time around 1 a.m. but it was only because someone had spotted the barns burning. Smoke was still rising from the structures, one completely fallen in, Thursday morning.

O'Daniel's wife, Peggy O'Daniel, estimated the loss of the hay at several thousand dollars, according to Vance.

Campbell said Thursday that the investigation into what the sheriff's department believes might be arson is ongoing. He indicated Hardin had spoken to more than one juvenile Wednesday night and was set to interview a suspect Thursday.

"Evidently they hang out in this area, but it sounded to me like there might just be one that's a suspect in the setting of the fire," Campbell said.

Are you still looking for signs from God?

For the most part I'm not a fan of the "Messages from God" billboards ("What part of 'Thou Shalt Not' didn't you understand?" "Keep using my name in vain and I'll make rush hour longer," "You think it's hot here?").

Launched a few years ago by a Fort Lauderdale advertising agency, there are 17 messages in all, each one signed simply "God."

I do, however, like the one that says, "Well, you did ask for a sign."

That always makes me laugh.

Years ago, a friend's teenage daughter was going through a time of rebellion, causing a lot of turmoil in the family.

For months my friend was distraught, begging God to do something in her daughter's life, get her attention somehow. That's when she learned that her daughter passed a billboard every day that read: "Jesus is real," which irritated the girl to no end.

To my friend, that billboard was a sign from God to comfort and encourage her and to remind her that he had his hand on her daughter no matter what outward circumstances looked like.

For me, a pig with wings is a sign from God, a reminder that he can do "immeasurably more than all we ask or imagine, according to his power that is at work within us" (Ephesians 3:20) and that he hasn't forgotten me.

For my friend Tara, her sign at one time was wild beehives. One day as she walked through the woods praying through her stuff that she was going through she asked God to show her a beehive. The next week as she walked in the same woods she heard some buzzing, looked up in a tree and there was a beehive.

When she walks in the woods, she'll ask God, "Show me something yellow, but it can't be anything manmade like a T-shirt. It has to be something you made" — and she'll see something yellow in the middle of all the green and brown.

Tara believes God gets a kick out of doing things like that and she does it, not to say, "If you're really God, then prove it," but to enjoy him and his creation and to join with creation in worship of him.

People in the Bible were always asking God to show them signs. God told a man named Gideon, who was hiding in a winepress from the Midianites to go save Israel from them.

Gideon gave a bunch of lame excuses, which God refuted, telling Gideon it would be OK because he'd go with him.

Not convinced, Gideon asked God for a specific sign: He would put a piece of wool out on the ground and if only the wool and not the ground was wet with dew in the morning, then he would trust him.

The next morning — wet wool, dry ground.

But just in case that was a fluke, Gideon asked God to do it again, only in reverse — dry wool, wet ground, which God did (Judges 6). God graciously condescended to Gideon's obvious lack of faith.

In other places in the Bible, when people asked for a sign God said no.

Some Pharisees who were following Jesus asked, "Teacher, we want to see a sign from you." Another translation says, "Teacher, we want to see your credentials." They were asking for hard evidence. A miracle or two, maybe calling fire down from heaven or making a rock turn into a T-bone steak.

Jesus not only told them no, he said only a "wicked and adulterous generation asks for a sign." Earlier in Matthew's gospel he told them they had "minds like a snake pit" (v. 34, The Message).

He told them the only sign they would get was the "sign of Jonah," the prophet who stayed inside the belly of a fish for three days. Jesus was referring to his upcoming death, burial and three-days-later resurrection.

As Christianity Today columnist Mark Galli put it, "The demand for signs is a demand for proof. It's a clue that the heart is not right. It's putting God on trial...Questions driven by a demand for signs never cease, and they never satisfy. The unfortunate conclusion in the gospel of John is, 'Despite all the miraculous signs Jesus had done, most of the people still did not believe in him (John 12:37).'"

But for those of us who do believe, sometimes God sends beehives and yellow things in the woods, billboard signs that irritate straying kids and pigs that fly.

Because he's like that for those he loves.

Faith Worship Center to have guest speaker

Faith Worship Center will have a special speaker, Dr. Macel Ely 10:15 a.m. Jan. 22.

Ely is a former pastor and Vietnam veteran. He is the founder of Barnabas Ministries International in Knoxville, Tenn. He is networking with pastors, churches, and individuals across the globe, that recognize the need to minister to ministers. He has earned a Master's of Divinity and Doctorate in Theology from International Seminary in Plymouth, Florida; and is a favorite conference speaker among a wide range of religious denominations and ministries. Dr. Ely also serves as a presbyter, adviser, and overseer of many congregations within the U.S. and other nations abroad.

Faith Worship Center is at 3160 Bloomfield Road,

Bardstown. For more information, call the church office at 348-7380.

St. Catherine Catholicism series

The Rev. Troy Overton will present a 12-part presentation series from the Rev. Robert Barron, Catholicism. This is an adult education series on various topics of the Catholic faith with needed content regarding the Catholic faith as well as a discussion of how it applies to our lives. This groundbreaking series is beautifully photographed and a tremendous presentation of the Catholic faith. The first session Amazed and Afraid: The Revelation of God Become Man will be 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. Jan. 22 in the Rev. Troy's office, across the hall from the gym at St. Catherine in New Haven. Contact the parish office at 549-3680 for more information.

Choir director recognition

Lee Evans and The Rev. Scott Stith, pastor of Bardstown United Methodist Church, recognized Lee Evans Jan. 15 for 20 years as adult sanctuary choir director. She received a plaque and gifts during the 11 a.m. worship service. During Evans' tenure as choir director, she directed numerous Christmas and Easter cantatas as well as weekly choir specials. Evans plans to continue serving in the music ministry at the church by singing in the choir.

Putting the county's puzzle pieces together

County Judge Executive Dean Watts and Nelson Fiscal Court are facing some vexing problems somewhat akin to playing a game of musical chairs, but with players who have different girths and with chairs of various and sundry sizes.

Fitting various agencies and offices into existing spaces and trying to make sure the agencies can not only co-exist but actually complement each other is the challenge. Unlike a real game of musical chairs, there is no penalty for not finding a place to land when the music stops. Right now, the problem is how to use existing space to the best advantage, particularly the Old Library on the square.

Finding a use for the 1914 Beaux Arts-style building has been an adventure since the Nelson County Library moved out of the structure. It was originally sold to a couple who wanted to develop it as a restaurant and perhaps a bed and breakfast. When that fell through the county stepped forward and purchased the building, putting on a new roof and doing some cosmetic improvements, looking toward moving at least part of the county clerk's operations to the building. When then-Clerk Phyllis Mattingly balked that idea was scrapped.

Most recently the building's first floor has been used as an art gallery and showcase for the Fine Arts Bardstown Society. It was a perfect match, except FABS could be considered the poster child for a non-profit organization: it has no money and pays no rent.

The idea was then floated by Judge Watts and some others to move planning and zoning and code enforcement to the location, giving the public a one-stop center to get information and tackle permit compliance. Planning and zoning is on the second floor of the Old Courthouse. Code enforcement is housed in a falling-down remodeled house east of the Sutherland Building.

A summit with interested parties last Monday, including the heads of the two departments, the judge and the two magistrates who make up the court's buildings and grounds committee, was enough to quickly established that no matter how desirable it might be to have the agencies under one roof, it was not the new roof of the Old Library. There were just too many issues that really did not have solutions without doing major remodeling inside the old building. So it is back to the drawing board.

The county still has a multitude of options available, including the 1892 Courthouse, the Sutherland Building, the Civic Center and now the space that will be available at the site of the new Senior Citizens Center at the old Plaza Center. Finding a perfect solution to the problem of where to put these departments is probably not possible, but with a spirit of compromise and cooperation Fiscal Court should be able to craft a plan.

OUR VIEWS

Fighting the fear of snakes

I understand the fear of snakes and spiders and creepy-crawlies is irrational, and I know that those who fear them generally understand this fact. While I aim to come to the crawlies' defense in just a moment, I'll admit my own irrational fear of (perhaps I'll say disgust at?) cockroaches, mostly because I sense they're dirty though I know factually they're particularly clean. Irrational.

But I'd like to change a few people's minds, particularly about snakes. First off, there are the common misconceptions: they're slimy (actually, smooth and dry) and they're aggressive (they're far more likely to flee you than to fight, and when they fight, it's out of fear similar to your own). Of course, the snake has been portrayed as a vicious creature since the Garden of Eden, which makes the fear even more difficult to suppress for some people.

Yet recent research related to snakes reveals how every creature on Earth has something to teach us —

sometimes something that could save human lives.

A study of Burmese pythons has found that the size of snakes' heart and organs increases dramatically after they've digested a big meal — in particular, the three fatty acids that come along with that meal. This helps snakes digest the meal, and then their organs shrink back to normal size. But in humans, enlarged hearts can indicate heart damage.

People who are athletic, however, also develop larger hearts, which helps them exercise harder and pump more blood.

Now, researchers have injected fatty acids into mice and found that a mixture similar to that which snakes ingest enlarged mice hearts in a beneficial way. Someday, scientists hope, this could lead us to a method to enlarge the hearts of those suffering from heart disease, so they can pump more blood safely.

From flying to efficient use of oxygen to disease immunity, animals throughout the world have adaptations we only now wish we had. But we have already learned a great deal from them, and scientists remind us that their preservation — and the preservation of their environments — is key to any future discovery.

On another token, the tendency to anthropomorphize (assign human personalities to animals) can get out of hand, as we see people keeping jungle cats and other exotic animals as pets. Even chimpanzees, which can sometimes display violent behavior, can't be treated like we would treat a human being. We do not do justice to the animal even by loving it as we would another human, because in so doing we're blinding ourselves to the animal's true nature, subjugating it as inferior to our own nature — and possibly missing something much more interesting along the way.

Of course, all of us have heard the horror stories of what happens when people's exotic animal "friends" appear to turn on them. A South African man was recently chewed to death by his pet 2,400-pound hippopotamus. Before his death, Marius Els had said: "Humphrey's like a son to me, he's just like a human." The thing is, the hippo didn't turn on him; it only perceived him differently than he wished it would. In that way, the relationship was not unlike those we experience between us humans, if only in the fact that all of us misunderstand others once in a while.

Is it copyright or control?

Let's break this web censorship down into something easy to digest. There are actual legislators who want to control what you and I are able to look at, what we search for or where we decide to spend our money on the Internet. These bills would give the government carte blanche to put any website on a blacklist, enforce its removal from any search engines in the U.S. and make it illegal for any financial companies, such as Paypal, to allow consumers to do any monetary transactions with the listed site. The proposed targets are foreign sites that infringe on our commerce and copyright laws. I can't resist the urge to be facetious and sneer about the language that echos of recycled propaganda. Do these types of measures remind anyone of things such as the Red Scare communist witch hunts in the '20s or '50s? Now, that may sound like a great leap, but I lived in fear of the U.S.S.R. in the '80s as a kid, listening to Cold War rhetoric just as kids hear now in the word "terrorist." And if you want to pass any legislation these days just put "terrorist" in the composition with how it contributes to our lack of jobs and the bill will slip under our noses into law. I know that sounds hyperbolic in general, but I promise I will bring this rant home so it makes more sense. With these laws, Congress can put your site on the blacklist without any hearing or due process. No, your site isn't foreign, contain any piracy activity or definitely isn't participating in terrorism, but because you have a shop on Ebay you could be blacklisted. Sounds crazy doesn't it? A woman's knitting site made it to the blacklist in Australia along with an insurance company when the two major Internet providers decided to have their own blacklists as recently as last year. There is a company here in the U.S. called Monster Cable that has already compiled its own blacklist that includes Costco, Craigslist and Ebay. Here is the web address to look at the list yourself: http://www.monstercable.com/counterfeit/dealers_blk.asp. Monster Cable adds Sears to a list of sites that infringe on its sales and consider Sears to be a "rogue" site as well. Monster Cable has joined with entertainment companies that want to contain control of how we buy, sell and overall consume. Let's pretend you don't knit, or sell secondhand shoes regularly on the Internet. Let's pretend you like to pontificate from your proverbial soapbox on your own personal blog. It's free on wordpress.com, you have no ties to Serbian mobsters and usually critique people on their sense of fashion, but one day you write about Serbian mobsters. You remark on their refined taste in counterfeit Italian designer shoes post a link to Wikipedia.org about the murdered mobsters, (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Category:Murdered_Serbian_mobsters) and a photo via Google image search for fake Italian designer shoes (http://www.google.com/search?q=counterfeit+italian+shoes&hl=en&client=safari&rls=en&prmd=imvns&source=lnms&tbn=isch&ei=v0YYT6WBMoLatgfS3tyBBA&sa=X&oi=mode_link&ct=mode&cd=2&ved=0CA8QAUoAQ&biw=1440&bih=720). You and I have committed a crime and we can be blacklisted. Moreover, in the future we could be blacklisted from posting on other sites just as 6-year-olds are on a no-fly list at the airport. It seems ridiculous and it is. The U.S. House of Representatives bill is HR 3261 (SOPA) and U.S. Senate bill 968 (PIPA). Let's stop this egregious trespass before it stops any other compromised liberties we still have. Since this is about the Internet, I am throwing some more links out there. For more information on who is supporting this bill go to <http://projects.propublica.org/sopa/> or to see Craigslist's info while it is still legal at <http://www.craigslist.org/about/SOPA>.

>> GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Budget challenges facing the state

There is good news and bad news for Kentucky as your General Assembly drafts a new biennial budget during this year's legislative session. Let's start with the good news: revenues are up.

For the current fiscal year (FY12) revenue to the state from all general fund sources is up over $137 million from what we budgeted. The forecasting group also projects a modest increase in tax revenue over the next two-year budget period, assuming the tax structure remains as it is today. Let's hope they're right — on both counts.

In presenting his budget suggestions this week, Governor Beshear made clear he wants no tax increases. The House leadership will not want that either, especially this election year. And, of course, the Senate doesn't want to increase taxes.

So much for the good news.

Now, even though we have reduced the budget over the last four years, our spending has increased. Mary Lassiter, the governor's budget director, told us that spending in the last year was actually higher than in the previous. This, despite the fact that the General Assembly cut spending in virtually all areas except: primary/secondary schools, corrections/public safety, and Health & Family services.

How can this be? Understand that, when we talk of our general fund we are speaking of all Kentucky tax dollars. When we talk, however, about total spending, we add in the (roughly) 400 percent federal match for every dollar we spend in Medicaid; and we spend a lot of money on Medicaid. This is true every year in every state.

But in FY 2012 we accepted federal stimulus money (hundreds of millions of your federal tax dollars), most of which were used to pay for increased Medicaid services. Medicaid, you will remember, is health care for people who are "poor." Medicaid enrollment in Kentucky has increased by 1,931 people every month for the last five years; FY 2011 ended with more than 815,000 people receiving benefits.

The bad news for our budget is that federal stimulus money will not be there any more. Therefore, says Mary Lassiter, we have a very challenging budget to write. Some estimate that we will be $500 million short.

The obvious answer, if you agree with the governor that taxes should not be increased, is to cut spending. But where to make the cuts? Remember those areas I mentioned that had no cuts — primary/secondary schools, corrections/public safety, and health & family services? Together, they cover about 89 percent of annual Kentucky tax dollar spending. All the cuts before now have come from the other 11 percent.

So we have a problem. We'll hear no end of grief if we cut in any of these three areas. Schools already complain that they are underfunded; in fact, they've had more students in class than anticipated and state funding fell behind about $57 million in FY12.

Corrections funding can be lowered if we cut the explosive growth in prison population, but law enforcement people don't even like what we've already been doing. And if Medicaid funding is cut, thousands will descend on Frankfort and call us heartless.

Then there is funding for the state's various pension systems, an obligation that we cannot — and will not — dodge. More on that in another column.

Looks like it will be a long session.

>> READERS' VIEWS

Columnist's words are deceptive

To the editor:
Kenny Fogle's column about Mitch McConnell's visit to Bardstown is a bit deceptive. He respects McConnell's office but disagrees with him on everything else. McConnell said that Obamacare is a bad bill and needs to be repealed. The reason that Republicans haven't offered any alternative is because we have the best health care system in the world, why change it? If Obamacare is such a good bill why is it reported to have more than 1,000 waivers granted to unions, crony capitalists? Fogle mentions that Obamacare has a "few problems," some of which might be the government mandate to have health insurance and how to pay for the 25 million who don't have or don't want insurance, minor problems I'm sure.

He thinks that career politicians are the biggest reason we are in this "mess" this county is in, implying that McConnell is the only career politician. Why not mention career politician Harry Reid, the Senate majority leader who would block anything Republican to advance his agenda ahead of America. Since Reid is the majority leader he is the biggest part of Fogle's so called "mess we are in." Reid will not even let bills come up for debate. Republicans have sent bill after bill through McConnell only to be stopped by Harry Reid. There is no compromise or bi-partisanship, just plain old obstructionism.

Fogle criticized McConnell for visiting Bardstown on the taxpayer's dime rather having his campaign paying for it. I had not heard that McConnell is running for anything right now. Is he not supposed to travel? What is wrong with coming to Bardstown? The media said nothing about career politician Nancy Pelosi's recent trip to Hawaii and stayed in a hotel that cost $10,000 per night. I am sure her campaign paid for it though. Liberals are so predictable.

>> NOTES OF THANKS

Thanks for helping with Angel tree

To the editor:
The NESTT Family Resource & Youth Services Center expresses great appreciation for those who sponsored children for the Christmas Angel Tree or assisted families to meet their needs in other ways. Participants are as included: Chaplin Christian "Disciples of Christ" Church, Chaplin Baptist Church including the Women's Mission Group, Bloomfield Baptist Church, Bloomfield Methodist Church, Bloomfield

Christian Church, Bloomfield Community Chest, Fairmount Church of Christ, the many individuals too numerous to mention by name, teachers and other staff at Bloomfield Elementary and Bloomfield Middle schools, the Bloomfield American Legion Ladies and Boone's Butcher Shop, Bardstown.

A special thank you to Amy Cundiff's second-grade at Bloomfield Elementary who made and sold Christmas cards and donated the proceeds to the NESTT to help families in need. All sponsors made it possible for children and their families to have a better Thanksgiving and Christmas for 2011. These community partners and other individuals helped the NESTT assist families in need which would have been impossible otherwise. Partners, you are to be commended for putting forth such a great effort. The NESTT thanks you from the bottom of our hearts.

No. 2 Bullitt East whacks Nelson boys, 101-52

Cardinal girls, Nelson wrestlers fall

PETER W. ZUBATY
pzubaty@kystandard.com

Nelson County's boys took it on the chin Tuesday from visiting Bullitt East — ranked as high as No. 2 in Kentucky — falling behind 20-5 early on the way to a 101-52 loss.

The Chargers' 101 points was the largest total hung on a Cardinal team since Feb. 22, 2005, when Shelby County won 100-50 at Nelson County.

John Land led Nelson County (3-14) with 17 points. The Cardinals have dropped seven in a row.

The Chargers (15-3), defending 6th Region champs and a Sweet 16 semifinalist a year ago, a run that included a first-round win over Bardstown, placed five players in double figure scoring. They were led by 20 points from 6-9 junior Derek Willis, one of the top high school players in the nation, who is expected to commit to the University of Kentucky today.

The Cardinals host Adair County (14-4) at 6:30 p.m. tonight in the front end of a boys-girls doubleheader. Nelson County will crown its basketball Homecoming queen and king between games.

Cardinal girls faded in the second half

Visiting North Hardin scored four unanswered points in the final two minutes Tuesday, handing Nelson County a 53-46 loss, snapping a five-game win streak by the Cardinals.

Nelson County (14-5) got 15 points from Cierra Drake and 10 apiece from Brianna Harmon and A.J. Lewis in the loss. Chanel Roberts scored a game-high 20 for North Hardin (14-5).

BOYS' 5TH REGION ALL A CLASSIC

Tigers rain 3s on Eagles

PETER W. ZUBATY/The Kentucky Standard

Bardstown's Devonte Grundy hit this jumper just before the end of the third quarter, part of a 36-8 finishing run over the final 10 minutes of the Tigers' 69-35 win Wednesday over Bethlehem in the 5th Region All A Classic semifinals in Greensburg. Bardstown takes on host Green County tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the championship with a trip to next week's statewide All A Classic on the line. The Tiger girls take on the host Dragons at 6 p.m. after advancing with a 52-32 win over Washington County.

Grundy, Brewer combine for 9 threes

pzubaty@kystandard.com

GREENSBURG — The first time Bardstown and Bethlehem met this season, the Eagles' upset bid put a big scare into the Tigers before they succumbed late, 64-61, last week.

The second time around, in Wednesday's Touchstone Energy 5th Region All A Classic semifinals at Green County, there would be no fear — only domination — as Bardstown canned nine second-half three-pointers in a 69-35 blowout.

"We can shoot the ball," Tigers coach James "Boo" Brewer said of his team's 12-for-20 performance from behind the arc. "But lately we haven't shot the ball very well. Tonight we shot 60 percent from behind the (three-point) line, and that's very good."

Shooting such as that can carry the Tigers (14-5) a long way in their quest for a return trip to the statewide All A Classic next week at Frankfort's Farnham Dudgeon Civic Center. But first, Bardstown will have to get past host Green County (4-15) tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the 5th Region All A championship.

Early on, things looked as though fans might see a repeat performance of the Jan. 10 nail-biter at Bardstown. The Tigers led just 9-8 after a quarter, and managed to stretch their lead to 21-14 with back-to-back driving layups by senior Anthony Myrks (13 points, two steals) to force a time out with 2:06 left before halftime. The Eagles (13-4) held the Tigers scoreless for the rest of the half, however, cutting the Bardstown lead to 21-17 at the break and trimming the lead to 21-19 on GREENSBURG — Bardstown slapped a frenzied full-court press on Washington County in Wednesday's girls' Touchstone Energy 5th Region All A Classic semifinals at Green County High School, building a big early lead and pouring it on from there in a 52-32 win.

The win put the Tigers (9-10) into tonight's 6 p.m. championship against the host Dragons (14-5), where they will be seeking their first trip since 2008 to the state All A Classic, which begins Wednesday at Frankfort's Farnham Dudgeon Civic Center.

The Tigers cruised behind senior Julia Comandini's team-high 15 points — including 7-of-8 at the free-throw line — and seven rebounds.

junior Jacob Browning's 15-footer 23 seconds into the third quarter.

That's when the fireworks started for Bardstown, as Jordan Brewer and Devonte Grundy each hit three-pointers during a 12-4 spurt over the next four minutes to give the Tigers their biggest lead thus far, at 33-23.

The Eagles battled back to cut the deficit to six on junior Jordan Cooper's drive and a pair of free throws by Browning, but the Tigers finished the third quarter on a 7-0 run capped by a steal which led to Grundy spinning off his defender and elevating for a 16-footer with two seconds left in the frame, making it 40-27.

"That kind of set the tone for the rest of the game," lamented Bethlehem coach Artie Braden.

Still, the Tigers were taking nothing for granted, and kept the pressure on. After all, the Eagles had twice worked their way back from 15-point holes in the previous meeting, trimming the margin to just two points with 13 seconds left before Bardstown could slam the door.

Grundy said Bethlehem's near-upset served to "make us play harder (and) go at them and play defense on them like they played defense on us. Just give them nothing."

The junior guard found Brewer for a left-wing three in the fourth quarter's opening minute, then got his own spot-up three a few seconds later, swelling the Tiger lead to 19.

From there, the shots just kept falling, as Bardstown hit 9-of-14 threes and 16-of-27 overall from the field in the second half, with its largest lead coming when the final buzzer sounded. The Eagles just couldn't keep pace on a poor shooting night (14-for-42 overall; 1-for-10 on threes), Braden said, and frustration set in for the Eagles, allowing things to snowball. Bethlehem was outscored 29-8 in the fourth quarter.

"They've got a lot of weapons, and they were clicking," Braden said.

Chief among those weapons was Grundy, who was 8-for-10 from the field and 5-of-7 on three-pointers, scoring 16 of his 21 after halftime.

"I don't know — I just came out ready to play from the get-go," he said, acknowledging it was the best game he had played so far. "I had to get going. I was taking good shots, waiting for my game to come to me and not rushing anything."

Grundy said it was also nice to see senior teammate Jordan Brewer have one of his better games of the season, as the coach's son pitched in 16 points and was 4-of-9 on three-pointers.

"The team started playing together, playing as a team," he said.

James Brewer said Grundy's play has gone a long way toward taking pressure off senior teammates such as Myrks, Brewer and Cody Ramos, the key holdovers from last year's Sweet 16 team.

"He's contributed a lot for us," James Brewer said. "Jordan shot the ball well, too. Jordan got us going. He's struggled a couple times the past few games ... (but) him and Devonte did a really good job."

"It was awesome because they beat us (earlier in the season), so it was kind of revenge," she said. "It was a really big game for us."

The Commanders (7-9) won both prior meetings between the two in district play, the most recent a 51-50 decision Jan. 7 in Springfield, where Kenya Turner hit a pair of game-winning free throws with no time left on the clock. The teams will play once more this season, in the first round of next month's 19th District tournament, hosted by Bardstown.

"We are ready for that," Comandini said.

With Bardstown leading 8-6 early, Keonna Stone — who pitched in with 13 points and seven rebounds — got hot and scored the next eight points for the Tigers, including a pair of three-pointers. They jumped out to a 16-7 lead after the first quarter by pressuring the Commanders into turning the ball over, taking advantage of hobbled Washington County point guard Shay Yocum, who suffered an ankle sprain in Monday's first-round win over Bethlehem. The Commanders committed 27 turnovers in the game.

"That was our plan — to put as much pressure man-to-man on them as we could," Tiger coach Paul Stone said, "just to see how well they could handle the ball. It worked."

Bardstown scored only one point in the first six minutes of the second quarter, but a stellar defensive effort held Washington County to only four points in the quarter. That set the Tigers up for a 9-0 run to finish out the half and they took control of the game at 26-11 heading into halftime.

Stone said one of the keys was keeping Turner, the Commanders' 6-2 junior center, out of her comfort zone. Turner battered Bethlehem for 31 points and 14 boards in Monday's 60-50 Washington County win, but she was held to just four points before halftime and 19 all game.

"We were able to keep the ball out of Kenya's hands," Stone said. "We did a much better job of denying her the ball" than in prior meetings.

Commanders' coach Bernard Smalley said his team didn't come with the same focus as Bardstown.

"We were missing two and three-footers, and it was just little things," he said. "Coach Stone had his bunch ready to play, and they outplayed us in every aspect of the game."

The Tigers put the game away early in the third quarter with a three-pointer by Abbie Parrish and a three-point play by Stone. After Stone stole the ensuing throw-in and put in another basket, she added another bucket, giving Bardstown a 38-14 lead at the 4:41 mark of the third quarter, its largest margin of the game. The Tigers held a 41-22 advantage heading into the fourth quarter, and with the starters resting in the final minutes, they pulled out a 52-32 win.

Down the stretch, Stone said he urged his team to burn as much clock per possession as possible and make the extra pass. That led to the breakout game for Comandini, an Italian exchange student who joined the team this year.

"Her teammates did a great job of getting her the ball," Stone said. "She finished on got fouled."

Bardstown ended up with 13 steals in the game and committed a season-low six turnovers.

Daughter's behavior puts her on the brink of banishment

DEAR ABBY: I caught my 16-year-old daughter, "Krista," smoking marijuana. I punished her for it, but never told my wife because I was afraid she'd force me to make a decision that I don't want to make.

I have been married to my second wife for three years. For much of that time, Krista has been a nightmare.

When she goes to school, more often than not she's in the principal's office for bad behavior. At home she's worse. She doesn't listen to anyone. We have tried every type of punishment of which we can think and nothing has worked.

Recently, my wife brought up the idea of sending Krista to a boarding school for troubled teens. At first, the suggestion made me angry, but after the marijuana incident I am more receptive to it. I am wracked with guilt. Sending my daughter away makes me feel like a failure as a father. But there may be no other choice. How does a parent know when enough is enough?

FED-UP FATHER IN MINNESOTA

DEAR FATHER: Do not send your daughter away to a boarding school for "troubled teens" without first having a psychologist identify what is troubling her. If you do what your wife is suggesting, your daughter could return home with more problems than with which she left. Sending her away should be a LAST resort. Some family counseling should be tried first.

DEAR ABBY: A friend has been confiding in me, telling me her husband abuses her. She says it has gone on the entire 12 years they have been together. He does it in front of the kids, sometimes even while she's nursing or holding their youngest. He also threatens to shoot her. I'm afraid for her safety.

She left him once, but went back after he promised to change and temporarily became the charming man she wishes him to be. She knows she needs to leave again, and I have told her I'll help her in any way I can to make it happen. She's trying to hold out until she finishes her degree and can financially support the kids on her own. I'm afraid she won't make it that long.

I feel so helpless. I worry that by standing by and not taking some kind of action, I'll be partly responsible for anything that may happen to the kids. On the other hand, she tells me these things in confidence. What can I do to help?

TERRIFIED FOR MY FRIEND

DEAR TERRIFIED: Continue encouraging your friend to leave. A man who abuses, terrorizes and threatens to shoot his wife — in front of the children, yet — would have no hesitation about hurting all of them.

By now she should have realized that her abuser will never be the man she imagined him to be. The time to leave is while things are calm — before his next outburst. In order for him to control her, he needs to keep her dependent. If he senses that she's nearing a point where she can support herself and the children without him, he could explode.

Make sure she knows how to contact the National Domestic Violence Hotline. The toll-free number is 800-799-7233. The experts there can help her formulate as safe an escape plan as possible.

DEAR ABBY: I am currently in a relationship that has become a roller coaster ride for the last few months. My significant other is always accusing me of cheating. He also starts arguments for no reason. Sometimes I wonder if he is having an affair and trying to throw the blame on me for his guilt issues. What do you think?

ARGUED OUT IN INDIANA

DEAR ARGUED OUT: That's very possible. Another reason might be that he's no longer interested in you and wants to break up. Rather than tolerate his emotional abuse, take the bull by the horns and ask him.

>> HOROSCOPES

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Others depend on you being responsive and open to suggestions. You are, but you can also be stern with reason. Today, dealing with a key person demands that attitude. Tonight: TGIF!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Tension builds if you don't detach. Use an ability to look at the big picture, and make decisions accordingly. Everything might not be as you would like, but it is doable. Ask yourself if negativity might be coming from boredom or fatigue. Tonight: Order in.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Try another situation or do something totally differently after a discussion. Find someone in the know who often gives insightful feedback. Trust in your ability to internalize. You will know which way to head. Tonight: Where the music is.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Dance to a new tune with the help of an avant-garde associate. When you start to see situations, people and events differently, new pathways are exposed as well. What do you have to lose? Tonight: Talk over dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Focus more on the individual; you could see a problem emerge otherwise. Others want their voices heard, and each individual has his or her own tonality. Though you could feel restrained, go 125 percent on this level. Tonight: Where the fun is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Ideas pop up from out of nowhere. You particularly enjoy being this innovative. Deal with an unexpected development more openly. Sometimes you close down when interacting in odd and unanticipated situations. Trust in your abilities to understand and move forward. Tonight: Opt for an adventure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Tension builds because of a snap judgment that has become an attitude. You need not greet a unexpected jolt with negativity. Few like being tossed into a new playing field. Be positive, and you can emerge a better person as a result. Tonight: No more resistance, please.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ No one understands the power of communication as well as you do. Why sit on the back burner? Walk in another person's footsteps. You will understand how you need to speak to this person. Tonight: Loving the moment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ What is occurring with your spending? Certainly a gift is a nice way of demonstrating your caring. Remember there are touching ways of expressing your caring without spending. A child or new friend makes a choice that stuns you. Tonight: Paint the town red.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ As a natural leader, you take the podium of life. Someone clearly becomes unusually responsive. Be aware of the effort that is involved to clear out a domestic or personal issue. You, too, must greet an element of the expected. Tonight: To bed early.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ You always have a lot on your plate. You enter a phase in which you express unusual vitality. Others sense this energy. Look at recent past issues. How have you been blocking yourself? Tonight: Do absolutely what you want.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Zero in on what you want. Others might not have the same mind-set to pursue your chosen course. Make it OK to follow through on your own. Surprised friends or associates might decide to join later. Your creativity surges. Tonight: Visit with friends.
